Who do you trust when you can't trust family?

Three months after her wedding day, Karen no longer trusts the man she married.

Paul, the self-proclaimed entrepreneur, works as a travel agent out of a single shop, yet somehow has the means to live extravagantly: the new BMW, high-end restaurants, designer clothes – only the best for Paul.

And whenever Karen reflected on their relationship, she would often arrive at the worrying conclusion that she knew nothing about him, and that there was a darkness in him that scared her.

When Paul leaves for another exotic business trip to Bordeaux, Karen decides to investigate. As she discovers the truth to her suspicions, she receives a call from her father – acting guarantor for Paul's business, which now owes the bank half a million!

As if that weren't enough, Karen's mother lies bed-bound and suffering from terminal cancer. And her dying wish is for the reconciliation between her twin daughters: Karen and Vanessa. But after Vanessa slept with Karen's fiancé, it's been over five years with rarely a word spoken between the two.

It comes to light that while his wife lay dying, Karen and Vanessa's father had been sleeping with another woman half his age.

As family tensions continue to rise, Paul's dark nature emerges from the shadows with fatal consequences.

Chock-full of scandal, shocks and confrontation, Walking Shadows is a thrilling take on a modern family drama.
